CREDIT UNIONS' PARTNER IN YOUTH FINANCIAL EDUCATION

The Richard Myles Johnson Foundation, established in 1958 as the California Filene Foundation, supports the financial education efforts of credit unions in California and Nevada, with a special focus on youth financial education.

The RMJ Foundation, a 501(c)3 organization, seeks to fund meaningful youth financial education projects, as well as to provide scholarships for credit union staff and volunteers to attend educational seminars and conferences.

We are pleased to support programs such as Biz Kid$ and the USA Today Education program, as well as several individual programs developed by credit unions.

Funding financial education programs is yet another positive public advocacy tool, and helps credit unions fulfill their mission of serving the underserved.

The Foundation is able to fund these vital programs because of the generous donations from credit unions and credit union organizations in California and Nevada.
